

ABSTRACT

To provide a low-stiffness air spring function without increasing the size of the equipment, a support frame, which supports a first gas chamber that is filled with a gas and that supports an object using the gas, is modified so that there is a second gas chamber, connected to the first gas chamber, provided within the support frame.